US Warns Russia, China, Turkey on Syria, Syria Crisis, More U.S. State Department issues updated travel warning for central, eastern, and southern Syria. Russia and China warn of new Syria-related sanctions. Russia warns Turkey not to use military force in Syria. As a result of the Syria Crisis, Russia's military intelligence agency, the GRU, hacked the networks of targets throughout Europe, including in Austria, Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, Hungary, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia, and Turkey, according to an investigation published Oct. 29 in The New York Times. The GRU spied on the same targets between August and September, the Times reports. The warnings reportedly come amid increasing rhetoric from the U.S. and Russia regarding the crisis. Syria's Information Minister Omran al-Zoabi said Syria was ready to deliver a "strong" response against the U.S. if Obama seeks to punish the Damascus government. Al-Zoabi said that if the U.S. uses force against Syria, it would be committing aggression against a sovereign state and the "Syrian people will respond to this aggression with full power." China Warns of New Syria-Related Sanctions China warned of new sanctions at the United Nations on Syria. China's foreign ministry said it had "expressed its serious concerns to the parties concerned" about new U.N. sanctions, the South China Morning Post reports. The country's U.N. delegation said on Nov. 3, however, that it supported U.N. Secretary-
