Easy to customize the app There are nine skins included in the download and a number of items that you can display with the gadget, such as live RSSI, adapter information, MAC, last scan and WiFi network list. Even though you can't seem to customize the application itself, you can tweak the layout by simply dragging-dropping buttons and dividers. What sets this app apart from others is that it doesn't just monitor your Wi-Fi network, it can also assist you in controlling it. You can set a preset IP address and device name so that your gadget automatically recognizes and connects to your network once you restart Windows, for example. Also included is Xirrus Wi-Fi Router Finder, which is intended to help you locate your Wi-Fi router, but it can also tell you if it is connected to a hidden network. Last but not least is Xirrus Network Traffic, which features network speed graph, network graph and network table. The setup The app is very simple to set up, starting with a setup wizard that will guide you through all the configuration options. If you want to use the app, just follow the dialog boxes and click 'Next' until the application is installed on your computer. An alternative app, Xirrus Network Wizard, is also available for use if you find the setup wizard a bit clunky, although the two apps are functionally the same.
