KeyMacro is a simple program that allows you to hotkey your Windows key. Using KeyMacro, you can use the Windows key to launch your favourite apps, windows, folders and files. KeyMacro allows you to assign any combination of keys you like to perform specific operations, even to open links in a browser. KeyMacro is so useful that you can define a specific combination of keys for each app that you use. So, for example, you can assign different shortcuts to Launch Office, Internet Explorer, Terminal, etc. KeyMacro will keep track of the apps you have assigned to it and will remember the state you have defined. If you leave the program for a while, the system will immediately remember the shortcut you have assigned to the app you just left. KeyMacro is a very powerful application, and can even be very useful for users who are looking for fast apps hotkeys. It can be used to launch any application with a Windows key, or to open the web browser with a specific URL. KeyMacro also allows you to define one key shortcut per app, which is an advanced feature that no other application offers. KeyMacro KeyMacro is available for Windows 10, 8.1, 8, 7, Vista, XP, and Windows Server 2008, 2012, 2016. You can do this via Wifi-direct, but why should you bother if you already have an old router at home? You can also use a microSD card, like an Adafruit Cloud Kit, but why should you when you can use a portable external hard drive? That's what I'm doing with my S3 Mini. There's a hard drive, but since it's quite big I can't put it on my backpack so I'm using an adapter in order to attach it to the USB port. That's what a MicroUSB to miniUSB cable is for. I had a mini-usb to mini-usb cable lying around and I figured, why not? Then I bought a miniUSB cable (yeah, I know, it was stupid because it's a cable for old computers) and I made a compact charger with a 3W LED flashlight. That's the other thing that makes it much more convenient to use this USB hard drive. It's a charger and a flashlight that fits perfectly in a jacket pocket. In October 2016, HBO announced that its streaming service would debut in Ireland. On February 22, 2017, at a press conference at the Red Room in Dublin's RDS centre, HBO announced the release date for the service as June 29, 2017, and the launch lineup for the service. In an interview, President of Entertainment at HBO Richard Plepler commented on the news,

Watch 4 Start is an application that helps you to keep track of all the apps run at Windows startup. It does not actually block any of these programs from running at startup, but simply keeps you updated regarding any changes made to the list of programs that are run when the PC is booted up. You can choose between receiving popup notifications or a desktop alert if you want to be informed of any changes regarding the startup apps. The utility also allows you to select any file (eg. a batch script) whenever a startup change has been logged. This way, you can make sure you do not accidentally close the alert windows without taking notice of the information. Benefits: - Keep an eye on the apps run at Windows startup - Choose any file to launch - Desktop alert or popup notification - Runs at Windows startup System requirements: - Windows 10/Windows 8/Windows 7 2017-09-25 4.0 windows 7, windows 8.1, windows 10 Ask Question Download Get latest updates, bug fixes, and new features of Sysinternals Autoruns free.
