Q: How to set up the Spring Tool Suite to run on JBoss? I use JBoss AS 5.0.0 Final and Spring Tool Suite 2.5.0. I would like to try the Spring Framework without dealing with what they are doing in the IDE. How would I start up a Spring Framework container so I can use the various Spring tools? Specifically, I want to be able to run a context or deployment descriptor and have the right stuff get generated for me. Would I be able to use JBoss's startup script for that? Alternatively, would I be able to use JBoss' container management to run a "real" webapp as a framework-independent stand-in to use the Spring tools on the standalone container? That seems like a recipe for more tears than I'd like. A: If you're wanting to be able to use your IDE you'd need to use JBoss Tools. JBoss tools have good support for Spring, Tomcat, and other run-times. It will provide you
