It is exciting to see a finished product that is the best you can possibly do, as a minimum. I would be very interested to know how many hours it took to create, and I would like to encourage you to have a go at posting your own work. It is very rewarding to see the finished product. You can upload the pic on the right of this blog page and if you choose to publish it on a network, I will put a link in the comments section. Please leave any feedback that you may have. Cheers. I have been thinking a lot about what I would like to do when I retire, and if I should go back into the building trade, or concentrate on photography. It has been a few years since I last looked into the building trade, and after watching some videos and reading some books on it, I felt that maybe I should go back and see what I missed out. In recent years I have been working in photography full time, but after reading about how many people do this job, I think I will have to reconsider. There would be a lot of learning that I would have to do, but the overwhelming thought that is in the back of my mind is, if I do stop working for a while, would I enjoy it? The answer is a resounding

Special thanks to all who have helped to make this version possible. Full Documentation (PDF) : How to change a VARIABLE in a UPDATE function in SQL? I am trying to update a variable called CELL in the below query so that it can be used in the whole UPDATE function itself without changing the WHERE condition. Any suggestion is appreciated. UPDATE [dbo].[TEST] SET CELL = (SELECT CELL FROM [dbo].[TEST] WHERE [DATE] = DATEADD(Month, -3, GETDATE()) AND [CELL] ='success'), [ATT] = (SELECT ATT FROM [dbo].[TEST] WHERE [DATE] = DATEADD(Month, -3, GETDATE()) AND [ATT] ='success') A: You can set a variable: SET @CELL = CELL; And then use that in your SET clause. This is covered in the documentation here. Bear in mind that this is a global variable, not a local one, so if you update the variable in a subquery, it will be updated in the parent where clause too. e.g. UPDATE dbo.test SET @CELL = CELL FROM dbo.test t 3a67dffec
